Comedy Central Panel Brings Together Creators of 'South Park,' 'Beavis and Butthead' and 'Digman!'

If the lineup felt like a Mount Rushmore of misbehavior, the vibe onstage was more comedy writers' room than walk of fame. Samberg, the youngest of the crew, said his comedy inspirations were literally sitting next to him. "(In middle and high school) We used to have South Park watch parties," he said. "Now I'm on a panel with them."

AJC: Macron's Recognition of Palestine Removes Hamas' Incentive for a Ceasefire

Three months ago, the President declared that France might recognize a Palestinian state — but only under certain conditions: the release of the hostages still held in Gaza and the disarmament of Hamas. Today, those conditions have not been met.

Did Epstein Think He Was Saving the Jewish Community from a Shanda?

A protracted trial, or a stringent plea agreement for that matter, would have landed him in prison for years. The swarm of press stories would have inevitably damaged the name of the Jewish community, using Epstein as the emblem of a Jewish sex trafficker.

Doing a Mitzvah at Comic-Con

Among those superheroes are the ones who donate blood at the San Diego Blood Bank, which was held inside the Hyatt Hotel, two hotels down from the Convention Center. I became eligible to donate at the beginning of July, but I was waiting to schedule an appointment during Comic Con since the available "swag" is limited edition. This year's shirt is promoting the Marvel Comics film Fantastic 4, which is in theatres this summer.
